If you circled 1, 2, or 3 for some of the questions above, discuss your answers with a healthcare provider. Only a healthcare provider can make a diagnosis of depression. Also talk with your healthcare provider if you circled 1, 2, or 3 for question 9. Having repeated thoughts of death or suicide is the most serious symptom of depression. If you are thinking of harming yourself, get help immediately. Make your feelings known to someone who can help you—your healthcare provider, family members, or friends. Your healthcare provider is an excellent person to tell. If this is not possible, go to the nearest emergency room, or call 911 or the National Suicide Hopeline at 1-800-SUICIDE (1-800-784-2433).
